Missouri Metro Areas See Significant Job Increases in September

With Missouri's unemployment rate at its lowest level in four years, employment (unadjusted) in September increased in the state's seven metropolitan areas. Employment increased by 11,200 jobs in St. Louis; 8,700 jobs in Kansas City; 3,300 in Springfield; 2,100 in Columbia; 1,800 in Joplin; 700 in Jefferson City; and 300 jobs in St. Joseph.

Columbia had the lowest unemployment rate among metropolitan areas at 3 percent while Kansas City topped the list at 5.1 percent. Unemployment was 3.5 percent in Jefferson City, 4.1 percent in Joplin, 4.7 percent in St. Joseph, 4.8 percent in St. Louis and 3.6 percent in Springfield. Read more...

Midwest Small Business Owners Plan Hiring Increases

Owners of small businesses in the Midwest have plans to increase hiring over the next year, according to the National City Small Business Index. However, these small business owners reported lower confidence in October, primarily because of automotive industry challenges, as well as the effects of high energy prices and the hurricanes. Over the past month in Missouri, the hiring index rose from 62.1 percent to 65 percent, while overall business confidence fell from 87.1 percent to 83.3 percent. Read more...

Incentives Review Committee Issues Report Designed to Improve Programs

A DED Incentives Review Committee has given final approval to a series of recommendations on state and local incentives and forwarded them to Gov. Matt Blunt, who directed the department in April to evaluate the programs to determine their effectiveness, efficiency, fairness and economic impact.

The committee evaluated 62 existing state and local incentive programs, all of which are either administered by the department or are directly related to the department's community and economic development activities. The report provides an overview of each program, recommended actions and explanations for each recommendation. The committee's suggestions may be used in the crafting of legislation that will address changes in Missouri's incentives programs.
